DEATH TO GRAPES.

One-third of the Early Varieties Killed by the Co .-- The Grape Acreage Around R. ligh.

Investigatione suchown that the recent cold weather completely killed the earlier plum crop, and most of the plum trees in this section were in full bloom. Last week they were beautifully white. Now they are dull brown, and dead.

It is estimated that at least one-third of the early grape crop is killed. The grape buds were not sufficiently advanced to be much affected by the frosts of ten days ago, but they developed very fast last week, and the cold weather of last Saturday and Sunday was too severe for them. All the buds that were out were killed, and the estimate is that one-third of the early crop-Ives and Champion varieties—is destroyed. Later varieties are not injured, because they had not budded. If the weather shall permit, some young gentlemen propose to ride five Some of the grape growers are a little "blue" over the damage done, but the loss will not amount to any con-

> There are about three hundred and sixty acres in grapes around Raleigh. One fourth of this acreage is in the earlier varieties, on which the damage has fallen. Therefore it appears that one-third of one-fourth of the entire crop is killed, or that one-twelfth of the entire crop is lost so far.

COLLEGE TRUSTEES' MEETINGS.

Trinity at Durham-Baptist Female College at Wake Forest.

Great interest is centered to-day in the meetings of the trustees of two very important educational institutions. The trustees of Trinity College have been called to meet in Durham, and the trustees of the Baptist Female College are to meet at Wake Forest College.

In the light of positive official advices that have been given out, it is totally impossible to determine for what purpose these meetings are called; but the general impression is that there will be efforts made to have a full reconsideration of the matter of locating the two Therehave been decisions to locate them both in Raleigh, this city having made certain propositions in good faith, which have been accepted. After these acceptances, there arose vigorous agitations, which have culminated in the calls for the meetings of the trustees of both institutions. Raleigh is therefore much interested in the probable reconsiderations in the matter of locating the col-

J. Hoyle, Belwood. The board is made up of a number of the eminently brainy and representative men of the State. Whatever matter comes before them will surely be considered carefully, and any conclusions they may arrive at may be safely trusted. In their hands the interests of Trinity College for the future as well as for the present will be nicely weighed and balanced, and whatever decision may be made will be on the right side.
